WINNING TEAM: David Owens and his campaigners after their historic victory.

Boston turns to the BNP

More votes than Con/Lab/Lib combined!

DAVID Owens, the British National Party's candidate in the Fenside ward by-election took 43% of the vote and polled more votes than all of the main parties added together!

It was an incredible result in the seat for Boston Borough Council which the British National Party were contesting for the first time.

Wayne McDermott, the BNP's East Midlands election officer, was more than happy with the outcome.

"There are two important implications in this result," he told Freedom.

"The first is that there are many similar wards in and around Boston, in which this result could be replicated.

Therefore Boston has the potential to become a key area for the BNP.

"The other important factor is the total collapse of UKIP. In the 2004 Euro elections, Lincolnshire was one of its strongest areas, so recent results make it clear that the BNP has overtaken UKIP as the main anti-EU party of choice for these voters."

Muslim leader "would vote BNP"

A Muslim leader has broken ranks with colleagues to attack Labour and pledge his support for the British National Party.

Sarfraz Sarwar, the Chairman of Basildon's Islamic Centre, told the Basildon Evening Echo:

"I've spoken with BNP representatives and they said they would respect the freedom of Muslims. It is a new BNP today and local people are voting for them and I would vote BNP too."

Sarfraz Sarwar confessed to being totally disillusioned with Labour.

"New Labour has no consideration for the feelings of Muslims or for the suffering it has caused by its foreign wars. You just have to look at the voting patterns of MPs on the Iraq debate. The BNP has always opposed the war in Iraq."

But the Muslim Council of Britain's spokesman, Inayat Bunglawala, was livid with his colleague for the remarks. He told the Muslim News:

"No Muslim in their sane mind would support the BNP, unless they were very naïve. Mr Sarwar has been exploited."

SARWAR: Voting BNP.

Public support for BNP councillor who condemned sex education for 5 year-olds

A British National Party councillor in Barking and Dagenham has been swamped by messages of support after he attacked Labour's sex education policy.

Lawrence Rustem was appalled when he read in a briefing paper that the Government proposed to give children as young as five sex education lessons including being taught "the pleasures of gay sex."

He wanted his local council to condemn the report and told a full council meeting:

"Teaching sex education to five year-olds is bordering on paedophilia. It is far too young an age to start prompting sexual awareness."

But before the BNP councillor could finish, outraged Labour councillors had him forcibly removed from the meeting.

But if Labour councillors thought the media coverage of Mr Rustem's ejection from the chamber and their demand for an apology would hurt the BNP, then they badly miscalculated.

"I have been swamped by messages of support from the people of Barking and Dagenham", he told Freedom. And will he be apologising?

"Most certainly not," he said.

"Any apology should come from Labour politicians for all the damage that they have done to Britain."

LAWRENCE RUSTEM: Public support.

Local democracy initiatives scrapped 'in case BNP get elected'

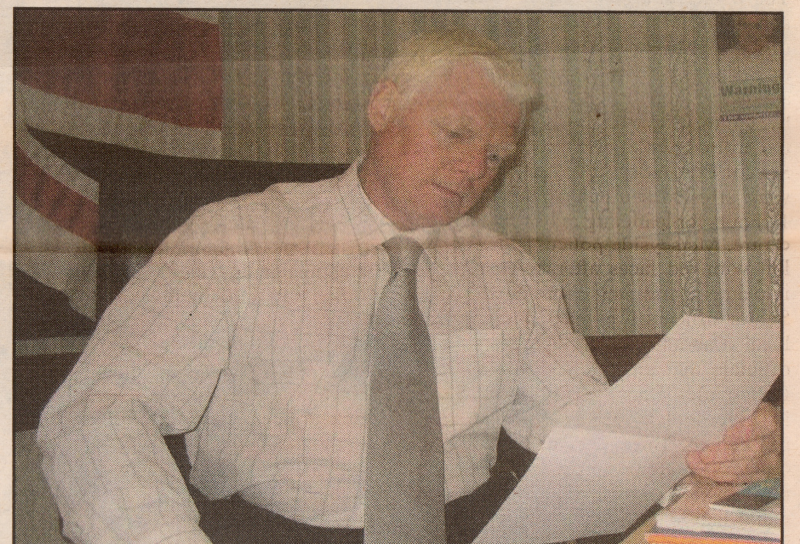

Labour is 'running scared' of the BNP

TWO of the Labour Government's manifesto flagship schemes have been scrapped because of increased electoral support for the British National Party in this year's council elections.

Locally elected mayors and direct elections to police authorities had been two of the Government's most publicised initiatives to give local communities more effective democracy, but now both have been shelved because BNP mayors and BNP police representatives have become a real possibility.

In Stoke-on-Trent, the leader of the 9-strong British National Party group on the council, Alby Walker, was the bookies favourite to become the city's next mayor - so the Government decided to abolish the post.

Now plans for direct elections to police authorities have been dropped by the Home Secretary Jacqui Smith because she said she feared that British National Party representatives could be elected to positions of influence.

ALBY WALKER: The leader of the 9-strong British National Party group on Stoke-on-Trent Council, was the bookies favourite to become the city's next mayor.

So much for Labour's claim to want to give local people more political influence within their own communities. It was just another lie from a bankrupt Party that will do anything to hang on to power.

BNP raises £300 for Downs Syndrome charity

A CHARITY event organised by Solihull British National Party has raised nearly £300 for the local Downs Syndrome Society.

Two hundred and fifty people attended the fundraiser held at the Knowle Royal British Legion and enjoyed a programme of entertainment. Solihull Downs Syndrome Society is currently raising money for "Harry's Fund" and young Harry was on hand along with Mum Jill to receive the cheque from the Solihull BNP councillor George Morgan.

In recent months other events have been held to raise money for Troop Aid and the Gurkhas and Frank O'Brien from Solihull BNP has been delighted with the response.

"Our efforts have been appreciated and the feedback from the public in general and goodwill created by these events certainly helps the Party's standing within the local community."

Anger at cost of anti-BNP demo

COUNCIL taxpayers in Amber Valley have been left to pick up a £250,000 bill for policing a demonstration against the BNP's annual festival held in August.

The money was spent on policing anti-BNP protesters who had been bussed in from outside the area by the trade unions and the Labour Party. During the demonstration, police officers were stoned, roads were blocked and tyres set on fire in an effort to stop people attending the festival.

Amber Valley BNP councillor Cliff Roper, laid the blame firmly at the door of Labour MP Judy Mallaber.

"She is responsible for this waste of taxpayers' money. £250,000 for policing a protest organised by groups funded by the Labour Party and at which she was the main speaker."

Police chiefs under fire as rank & file oppose political witch-hunt

"Our senior officers are doing the Labour Party's bidding"

THERE is a growing disquiet amongst officers within Merseyside Police over the witch-hunt launched by the force's police chiefs against the British National Party.

The wrongful arrest of BNP leafleters and the hounding of one of their own officers because his name appeared on a stolen BNP list, has led to a gulf appearing between the orders issued by senior officers and the thinking of the ordinary bobby on the beat.

Seven days after 13 BNP members were arrested and held in custody for 12 hours for leafleting in Liverpool city centre, Merseyside police bosses were left with red faces after being forced into an embarrassing climb-down. Senior officers had been bragging to local Labour Party councillors and officials that anyone distributing the BNP leaflet 'Racism Cuts Both Ways' in Liverpool would be arrested and prosecuted. But that was before the Crown Prosecution Service ruled that the leaflet "was unlikely to increase racial hatred" and could quite legally be distributed. Apparently police chiefs were livid and immediately appealed against the decision, sending in a huge list of objections to the ruling. But it was all to no avail and their appeal was rejected, which meant they had to inform the local Labour Party that the British National Party were quite at liberty to put their leaflets out in the city after all.

The hounding of PC Steve Bettley, who was suspended from duty and now faces a misconduct panel, because his name appeared on the list illegally published on the Internet, has also upset his colleagues.

Dozens of officers have contacted the BNP to voice their concerns at the witch-hunt "against one of our own", HOUNDED: Colleagues believe that the campaign against PC Steve Bettley (above) is politically motivated.

and to express their bewilderment that senior officers appear to be taking their instructions from the Merseyside Black Police Association after it had told the Liverpool Post:

"The MBPA believes that where a police officer or police staff member is a member or supportive of the aims and objectives of the British National Party, they should be dismissed from service."

As if to placate the MBPA, Chief Constable Bernard Hogan-Howe, felt the need to echo their message in the same report.

It is this pandering to political interest groups and the abandonment of the principles of fair policing that has caused unrest within the force.

"There is unease amongst rank and file officers that decisions are being made because of political pressure and this goes against the very bedrock of good police practice," one officer told Freedom.

He said that he believed Merseyside police chiefs were doing the bidding of the Labour Party and that the campaign against the British National Party in Liverpool had been prompted by the growing support for the BNP in the city.

LIVERPOOL 13: British National Party supporters gather in Liverpool city centre in a show of support for their arrested colleagues. On the morning of the demonstration, all of the 13 leafleters arrested were informed in a letter, delivered at 6.00am, that they wouldn't be facing any charges.

BNP councillor wins funding for boxing club

A BOXING club which has been living hand-to-mouth since Havering Council increased its rent by 2,500% has been given some good news at last thanks to BNP councillor Mark Logan.

Five Star Boxing Club, in Gooshays Drive, Harold Hill, has been awarded £35,000 funding from the Youth Capital Fund - a Government project that sees young people making decisions about where grant money goes in communities.

The money will be used to build a new roof for the club's centre following years of repairing leaks. The grant was made possible after Gooshays ward councillor Mark Logan, was asked to apply on behalf of the club. He told the Romford Recorder:

"The club asked me to help in their application, which I did. One of my pledges when I was elected as a BNP councillor was that I wanted to do something for the youth of the area."

MARK LOGAN: At the Five Star Club in Harold Hill.

FORMER TORY: Michael Smith, who farms in Kinross, believes the British National Party could prove more popular than the Conservatives in parts of Fife.

BNP farmer to take on Gordon Brown

A life-long Tory supporter who left the Conservative Party to join the BNP, is to stand against Gordon Brown at the next General Election.

Michael Smith, the son of Second World War hero Sir Alan Smith, will be the British National Party's candidate in the Prime Minister's Kirkcaldy and Cowdenbeath constituency.

In an interview with the Sunday Times he said that he had become disillusioned with the Tories because of their lack of real opposition to Labour and joined the BNP.

"We are a small, patriotic and dedicated party. I was at a BNP meeting just recently in Perth, and the people there were ordinary family people who are proudly patriotic."

"I'm patriotic as well. I'm Scottish but I'm also proud to be British."

Michael, who farms in Kinross, believes the British National Party could prove more popular than the Conservatives in parts of Fife.

"I have friends from mining areas and the Tories will always be remembered there for the miners' strike and the poll tax," he said.

"The BNP is the only real opposition to Labour"

He believes there is too much deceit and lack of accountability in politics today and that the Labour Government has failed the British people.

"Immigration is a big issue because the numbers being let in are far too big. Europe is a drain on our resources and I just think that, overall, Labour has been pretty treacherous and they are treating us like fools."

"You have cases like that of Kriss Donald, the schoolboy killed by a gang of Muslims in Glasgow. If it had been the other way around, all hell would have broken loose from the PC brigade. Also, if I was to marry somebody else I would be a bigamist but a Muslim can have four wives and can get tax credit for it!"

Police commend "public-spirited" BNP representative

CUMBRIA Constabulary have praised the actions of Carlisle BNP official Karl Chappell, after he came to the assistance of an elderly lady who was being mugged, and then apprehended her attacker.

Karl was out with his family in the Stanwix Bank area of the city when the incident occurred. He heard the cries of the victim and ran to her aid, fending off and then detaining the mugger while the police were called.

Writing to thank Karl, Chief Inspector Julie McFee said:

"Officers have brought to my attention your actions when an elderly lady was attacked and had her handbag stolen. Your quick and public spirited action meant that a man was swiftly arrested for the robbery and he has since been charged with the offence."

"It was terrifying for the victim but I understand that the lady concerned was checked out in hospital and then reunited with her family."

"Your actions were commendable and I want to sincerely thank you for assisting to bring a man to justice for an attack on a vulnerable lady."

The secretary of Carlisle BNP said that he was pleased to help. "I heard the lady's cries and acted as any good citizen would have done. You don't think about what you are doing, you just go to someone who needs help."

Karl was a British National Party candidate in Carlisle at last year's local elections and polled over 10% of the vote in the city's Botcherby ward.

KARL CHAPPELL: Saved an elderly lady from being mugged.

THREE incredible performances from BNP candidates in the two weeks before Christmas show that the British National Party is in fine fettle after all the drama of a stolen membership list being leaked, and well prepared to make 2009 the 'Year of the BNP'.

In Shildon, in County Durham, Mark Walker finished just two votes from victory in the town's Sunnydale ward where Labour won both vacant seats.

MARK WALKER: Just two votes from scoring a famous victory.

There were four re-counts before the result was confirmed which shows the growing popularity of the British National Party in the region.

Mark, a former RAF technician and school teacher at the local Sunnydale Comprehensive School, claimed a moral victory in losing the town council by-election by one vote. He told the Northern Echo:

"I am disappointed, but it is a tremendous result for me to stand in a town that I am not even from and come this close. It just goes to show how far the Party has come and it makes me want to work even harder."

"All we are trying to do is improve our local community and make the country a better place."

In Whitehaven in Cumbria, Simon Nicholson came from nowhere to cut the Labour majority of over 1010 to just 16 votes in the county council seat of Kells and Sandwith.

Both Labour and the Tories brought up their 'big-guns' for the contest, with the Labour candidate a personal assistant to former MP Jack Cunningham, and the Tory representative, the wife of the Conservative prospective parliamentary candidate for Copeland.

The British National Party's candidate was 35 year-old Simon Nicholson, a father of four who had served for eight years in the King's Own Border Regiment. He was born and has lived all his life in the ward.

Copeland BNP organiser Clive Jefferson, was delighted with the result and praised the hard-working campaign team that had so nearly written a new page in the political history of Cumbria. "When the other campaigners had gone home, we were still knocking on doors. We pushed the Tories into third place and reduced Labour's massive majority to just 16. We will contest the seat again in June and will pull out all the stops in search of that first British National Party victory in the county," he said.

In Ibstock in North West Leicestershire, Ivan Hammonds was just 15 votes from victory as the Tories took the seat from Labour.

It was another agonising evening for the brave BNP candidate who was just 64 votes from victory in January when Labour won the seat. East Midlands election officer Wayne McDermott, praised the local BNP campaign team for achieving another great election result for the British National Party in the region.

"David then strikes Goliath in the head with a stone from his sling; the Philistine falls on his face to the ground."

"They were superb with up to twenty activists out canvassing most days in the final weeks. We were so close to victory, having overtaken Labour, only to be pipped by the Tories who had persuaded a high-profile local campaigner to stand for them. I'm certain that it's going to be third time lucky for the BNP in Ibstock next time," Wayne told Freedom.

The votes in Leicestershire and Cumbria show that the British National Party is in great shape in two of its most important regions for the European Elections in June. In the East Midlands and the North West, the Party needs to poll around 9.0% of the vote to gain a seat in the European Parliament. On these results we could just be on course to achieving that goal.

Euro Election Analysis

BACK in June 2004 the British National Party came close to winning a seat in the North West Euro Constituency when just 31,727 votes short, which was only 1.5% of the total vote.

Unfortunately this time around, because of the new countries joining the European Union, Britain has lost a number of its seats in the European Parliament and in the North West there are now just eight seats up for grabs rather than the nine in 2004.

But thankfully, because of the nature of the D'Hondt voting system, that will not make too much difference and based on 2004 voting patterns we would need another 33,842 votes

(1.6%) to take the last and eighth seat on offer.

But of course, the voting patterns next June will be very different from 2004 because of the collapse of the UK Independence Party which could mean that as much as 90% of the UKIP vote will go elsewhere. While the BNP will hope to pick up some of this, the lion's share will go back to the Tories from where it came, and because the Tories took that 8th seat in 2004 this could raise the percentage needed to win that seat. However this might well be compensated by the fall in the Labour vote, which could once again drop the percentage needed to win the eighth seat back to around 8%.

NICK GRIFFIN: Came so close in 2004.

EURO-ELECTION APPEAL

The British National Party is on the verge of a major breakthrough into mainstream politics. Last May, the BNP achieved another good set of local election results and gained representation on the Greater London Assembly. In June 2009, it's the European Elections and it is vital that we continue to make progress.

But to win against the old gang parties in such a fiercely contested set of elections needs considerable funding and we are appealing for your help as the BNP makes this vital push for power in order to save our country.

What We Stand for

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with many more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Much tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of capital punishment for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the £billions wasted in foreign aid to fund 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the European Union for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union to restore Britain's freedom. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside. A ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need, an end to field trials of GM crops, and the restoration of our 200 mile fishing limit.

FAIR PLAY FOR ENGLAND: The setting up of an English Parliament to give England the same right of self-determination within the United Kingdom as enjoyed by Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: A major expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The introduction of referenda and direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Forces and cost jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last policy. Like all the other democratic political parties, the British National Party includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of Labour, the Tories and the Lib-Dems. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

Righteous anger & political action

THE British National Party believes in telling the truth, even if it is sometimes uncomfortable to hear or offensive to those who would rather bury their heads in the sand than face real problems in our society.

But while we often pass quite critical comment on the impact of immigration, multiculturalism and alien religions on the indigenous people of our lands, we have no animosity towards immigrants, their descendants or the followers of non-native religions.

Nor do we intend to encourage others to feel such animosity, or believe that anything we have to say is likely to 'stir up hatred' against anyone. In fact, we believe that by providing a peaceful and Constitutional outlet for the anger and the frustration felt by millions of our people over the undemocratic transformation of our country by our political masters, the BNP actually defuses tensions.

Where there is 'hate' we seek to turn it into righteous anger and political action against the only people who deserve to be hated - the politicians who use our taxes to turn our country into a place where we often feel like strangers in our own land.

Yet another racist attack the BBC didn't bother to report

DOCTORS say a Rochdale teenager is lucky to be alive after an horrific racist attack.

Kieran Parker was waiting at a taxi rank in the town centre following his girlfriend's works' Christmas party when he was brutally attacked by a gang of Muslim men.

The 19-year-old warehouse worker tried to run away but the gang caught him and beat him till he was barely conscious before throwing him off a bridge into the river.

The former Hollingworth High School pupil fell 25ft into the freezing water but managed to swim to safety.

Kieran was taken to Rochdale Infirmary, where he received treatment for a cut on the back of his head and above his left eye. Several of his teeth were broken and he had footprints covering his body where he had been repeatedly kicked.

Greater Manchester Police confirmed they were investigating a racist attack: "During the assault the 'Asian' offenders shouted racial abuse at the white victim."

Attackers shouting racial abuse?

A lone victim kicked senseless by a racist gang?

KIERAN PARKER: Thrown off a bridge into a river and lucky to be alive.

... and then thrown off a bridge?

If that had been an 'Asian' victim attacked by a White gang it would have been the main story on the BBC's national news. But because the victim is White and the attackers were 'Asian', the Corporation didn't bother to report it at all.

Solidarity
THE BRITISH WORKERS' UNION

Whose side is Labour really on?

LABOUR is on your side - claims the Party's latest slogan but who is the 'you' it refers to?

It's certainly not Britain's White working class who have lost out in jobs and housing more than any other section of society since Labour came to power in 1997.

It's certainly not the British majority - people on middle and modest incomes who under Labour have been encouraged to saddle themselves with record breaking levels of debt and now that the credit boom has finally burst, face losing everything they have.

Labour is only on the side of special interest groups amongst which they cultivate support by using favoured legislation in an effort to secure their block vote at election time.

Labour is on the side of ethnic 'minority' communities, migrant workers, refugees and asylum seekers whose votes it sees as more important than those of the indigenous population in its battle with the Tories to hold on to power.

Britons foot the bill to keep power prices down in France and Germany

Foreign electricity companies are exploiting British households in order to protect their own country's folk from rising prices.

Electricity bills in Britain have increased EIGHT times faster than in other major European countries because here our electricity is provided by the foreign firms who control our power supplies.

Electricity unit prices in Britain have risen by 15% in the 12 months to October 2008 whilst in France electricity bills have risen by just 5.5% over the same period - and that's despite the fact that many British and French households are buying power from the same supplier, EDF.

A clue as to why lies in what 'EDF' stands for - Electricite de France!

In Germany, households have paid just 1.7% more over the last year for electricity sold to them by German firm RWE. Now that's just one-eighth of the price rise the same German firm has demanded from British families receiving their supplies from Npower, the British arm of RWE.

It is quite natural for French and German companies to want to put the welfare of their own people first like this, and in France there's the additional safeguard of the Government regulating the prices that electricity companies can charge the French people.

What a contrast to here in Britain, where successive Labour and Tory Governments have stood by and allowed foreign firms to come here and exploit the British people, aiding and abetting the privatisation of our power industry and its sell-off to foreigners.

The British National Party believes that electricity, as well as gas, water, railways and other essential utilities and infrastructure should be taken back under the control of the British people and run solely for the welfare of British people - not for private profit and to keep energy prices low in France and Germany.

BRITONS FIRST:

The State should be supplying our essential services, not profit-making foreign companies.

Hypocrisy of animal rights campaigners

ANIMAL RIGHTS campaigners come out in force to protest at our huntsmen, at shoppers buying fur coats and even to complain about Prince Edward smacking his dog.

But every day in our high streets they walk by shops selling the meat of animals killed in the most barbaric fashion possible and do nothing, no protest, no picket, not even a letter of complaint to the local newspaper.

In Britain today, millions of farmed animals face having their throats cut while fully conscious - and without even being stunned first. It's called ritual slaughter and is such a cruel practice that the Farm Animal Welfare Council has consistently for it to be banned, but the Government refuses for fear of losing the Muslim vote.

Ritual slaughter leaves a calf to die in unbelievable agony for two minutes. Animal welfare campaigners should be shaming those that demand to have their meat killed in this way, just as they try to shame people who hunt

NEWS IN BRIEF

■ MORE foreigners have been granted citizenship in Britain than in any other European Union country, according to the latest figures released.

Of the 154,000 foreign nationals granted British citizenship, Indians accounted for 15,125. Pakistan nationals granted British citizenship numbered 10,260.

Most of the new Britons came from Asia, Africa and former Eastern bloc countries.

■ OVER 2,000 foreign criminals in British prisons have been given early release AND compensation for not serving their full term!

As well as walking free having served less than half of their sentence, each is entitled to around £7 a day in compensation to make up for missing out on the state-provided food and lodging they would have received had they remained in jail.

So for committing crimes in Britain, foreign criminals have this year actually received payments totalling £369,455 from the British taxpayer.

■ THE Catholic Education Service has recommended that all Catholic schools should provide facilities for other faiths.

This includes providing prayer rooms and flexible lessons so that pupils can go to prayer when required and also adapting toilet facilities to accommodate ritual cleansing.

Can you imagine Islamic schools providing such facilities for their Christian pupils?

■ IMMIGRATION has pushed our density of population to a higher level than any other country in Europe.

The figures, released by the Office for National Statistics, indicate that there is an average of 395 people in every square kilometre in England.

This is an increase of five per sq km in the past two years.

Government knew Games would bring no benefits

THE Government went ahead with the 2012 Olympic bid despite being warned that there would be no economic or social benefits.

Its own 'Game Plan' study found that in the areas of urban regeneration, sporting legacy, tourism, celebration and culture, and wider economic uplift, there would be no tangible effects from hosting the Games.

But the London bid still went ahead and now the cost of the Games has soared to £9.3 billion, three times what Ministers initially stated.

Training to help understand Islam

BRTAIN'S clergy, media, police, teachers and public sector workers are to receive training for a better understanding of Islamic beliefs and practices.

Dispelling the Myths and Bridging the Gaps, takes a closer look into service provision development issues for Muslim communities and is a course for those who wish to increase their knowledge of Islam.

NEWS IN BRIEF

■ GANGS of Muslim youths are making life a misery for people living on the Staincliffe estate in Batley.

They have hurled racist abuse at elderly residents, made obscene suggestions to girls and young women and even mocked a disabled man, threatening to tip him out of his wheelchair. Street signs have also been pulled down, bins overturned and cars vandalised. Police have been repeatedly called out but residents say nothing gets done.

Inspector Neil Moly of Batley Police, said they were aware of reports of abuse and anti-social behaviour.

"We are working very closely with local mosques to ensure that the quality of life for residents is improved," he added.

■ FARMERS and smallholders could be forced to sell-off their fields to make way for gypsy camps.

25,000 gypsies need to be accommodated and local councils have been told to draw up plans. Any landowners refusing to sell will face compulsory purchase orders.

The Government says the move will save the money spent on legal actions to force the gypsies to move on.

■ TWO Iraqis accused of the murder of two British soldiers have been given Legal Aid to fight being handed over to the Iraqi authorities to stand trial.

Faisal al-Saadoon and Khalaf Mufdhi are in the custody of British forces in Iraq for the murder of Staff Sergeant Simon Cullingworth and Sapper Luke Allsop in 2003.

Lawyers acting for the Iraqis say it would infringe their "human rights" if they were tried in their home country.

■ IMMIGRATION has swollen the population of Britain by 1.8 million since Labour came to power.

The latest figures show that net migration hit 200,000 last year, a four-fold increase from the 50,000 a year in 1997 when Labour came to power.

Amnesty would cost us £4 billion

GRANTING an amnesty to illegal immigrants will cost the British taxpayer more than £4 billion each and every year.

But that's what the Tories' Mayor of London Boris Johnson, wants to do because he claims an amnesty would boost tax revenues.

The reality will be very different with benefit payments to the unemployed soaring and British workers, whose wages are held down and jobs taken by immigrants who came here illegally, will be the victims of the amnesty.

Allowing illegal immigrants to stay in Britain will only encourage others to come in the hope of further amnesties being granted.

That's what has happened in the past 20 years, and in Spain, which has granted six.

Brixton rioters asked to help re-write history and to bring along a petrol bomb or brick as well!

RIOTERS who stoned the police and threw petrol bombs in Brixton nearly thirty years ago are being asked to come forward and recount their experiences.

The Brixton riot on 11th April 1981 was one of Britain's most serious. It resulted in 279 policemen being injured, 56 police vehicles being burnt-out and 150 buildings damaged. But despite there being over 5,000 involved in the disturbances there were just 82 arrests made.

Now the Museum of London is launching a new gallery to remember the riots and is asking members of the Brixton community past and present to collaborate on a permanent exhibit exploring the changing lives of Londoners after 1950.

The Museum is keen to hear from people who were involved in the riots and who would be willing to share their personal stories.

Apparently participants will be interviewed and photographed as part of the project and asked to bring along 11TH APRIL 1981: A police van is in flames in a brick strewn road in Brixton.

an object (brick, petrol bomb?) that represents the riots and could be donated to the Museum's collection. Lucie Fitton, Inclusion Officer for the Museum of London, enthuses:

"This project provides an exciting opportunity for a younger generation of Brixton residents to learn about this important part of London's story from those who experienced it first hand."

And just in case the former rioters are short of a few bob, the Museum is happy to pay any expenses incurred when telling their story.

Foreign Aid is hurting our people

THE Labour Government says it hasn't got the money to spend on Britain's sea defences, yet it can afford to help Caribbean Islands prepare for storms caused by climate change.

People who were flooded out of their homes last summer are still living in caravans with their families, yet the Government can give money to flood victims in Ghana.

Our village schools are closing because of lack of funding, yet the Government has given £150 million to India to help ensure that all Indian children get primary school education, and has increased its spending on education in Africa by over £1 billion.

People in Britain diagnosed with cancer are told that there's no money to pay for the medicines they need, despite the fact that the Government can give Zimbabwe over £5 million for medical supplies.

It's right to give help to the people of foreign countries when they are in need, BUT NOT when your own people are also in need.

Last year the Government made 1,119 specific donations to foreign countries in Overseas Aid. From £7 million to Bangladesh for tax reforms to £5.5 million for football tournaments in Africa, from £9 million to Burma to £1.4 for Tajikistan.

In all, the Government sent £7.5 billion last year overseas - and that's our money which is needed just as much here in Britain.

Football for Africa but no help for our flood victims

Don't say 'British' - it might cause anxiety

A COUNCIL has told staff not to use the term 'British' as it could cause anxiety to people from the ethnic minorities.

Officials at Caerphilly in South Wales were cautioned that the word is inclusive and creates a false sense of unity which would exclude people who didn't see themselves as British.

The directive, contained in a leaflet entitled Equalities in the Delivery of Council Services, said the word British was offensive to many people living here and was outdated along with words such as 'Negro', and 'half-caste'.

NEWS IN BRIEF

■ THE Government has approved changes to the law to allow employers to positively discriminate in favour of the ethnic minorities in job recruitment.

Companies will now be able to recruit staff on racial grounds, rather than qualifications or suitability, as long as the applicant is Black or Asian.

■ THE Home Office has admitted that there are now five different Police Associations for officers that are members of the ethnic minorities.

This is despite the numbers of black and Asian recruits being halved over the past five years.

■ EUROPEAN Union Justice Minister Jacques Barrot, wants the 27-nation bloc to provide higher standards for asylum seekers.

He called on member states to establish national procedures to meet the needs of asylum seekers, including easier access to employment.

■ THE leader of the Liberal Democrats in the European Parliament has called for all drugs to be legalised.

North West MEP Chris Davies, said it was the only way to prevent drug-related crime. Drugs research body, Drugscope, said calls to legalise drugs were "naive".

YOU would have thought that the Annual Conference of Britain's fourth most popular political party would have warranted a report of a couple of lines at the very least even if in just one of our national newspapers. But apparently it wasn't newsworthy enough, and in years gone by I would have been desperately disappointed at this lack of coverage which would have left the public completely in the dark as to the event taking place. But this year it didn't matter because thanks to the BNP website the conference was taken live into the homes of thousands of our supporters who didn't come to Blackpool, and in the months to come any new visitors to our website will be able to see and hear the best speeches, debates and lectures from the Conference thanks to BNPTV.

Political awakening

Nick Griffin's speech was topical and sharp, linking the recession to the public's political awakening and realisation that only the British National Party can safeguard our people through these most difficult of times. He detailed how only an economy based on national interests, which directly protects the livelihoods of the British working people and the welfare of our most vulnerable and elderly, is the way forward. The 2008 Conference was the best organised one that I have attended and that's down to Micheala Mackenzie whose experience and professionalism in this sphere has taken the Party's political events to a new level over the past 12 months. The debate was also better than anything in previous years and the calibre of our delegates continues to impress. The future looks very good for the British National Party in 2009.

Newcastle sale launches county council campaign

IN preparation for the county council elections in June, local members held a successful paper-sale in Newcastle-under-Lyme town centre on Saturday 6th December. Helping with the activity was Stoke City BNP councillor Michael Coleman, who told Freedom.

"We don't have elections in Stoke so we shall be helping in Newcastle. We sold a fair quantity of newspapers and got a very good reception. The main topic of conversation during the paper-sale was the credit crunch and how it affects not just working class folk but the middle class as well."

SOUTHAMPTON: Local organiser Lilian Taylor, opens the meeting.

Lilian's put the BNP back on the map

THE Southampton unit of the British National Party held its last meeting of the year in December and those present paid tribute to the efforts of local organiser Lilian Taylor.

She has worked hard to re-establish the BNP in the area and along with secretary John Easton, is already preparing the ground for the next round of local elections in June. Guest speaker Andrew McBride, the BNP's South East Regional Organiser, asked if there was anyone in the audience who would be prepared to stand as a local election candidate, and three members stepped forward to offer their services.

BNP respected in Welwyn and Hatfield

A Christmas social for the Welwyn and Hatfield Group of the British National Party raised a total of £139 thanks to a popular raffle.

Organiser Mark Fuller, told members:

"We have a lot to celebrate. As a political group we have become well known and respected in the area and accepted by people as a voice for the local community. We now meet on a regular fortnightly basis, and have a Freedom round that is growing every month. The guests tucked into a delicious buffet provided by a friendly publican and the success of the raffle rounded off an enjoyable and productive evening."

WELCOME: Mark Fuller and his committee prepare the buffet.

BNP becoming a force on Dennis Skinner's patch

MOVE over Dennis Skinner, the Beast of Bolsover is establishing itself in the Beast of Bolsover's constituency.

There were more than 60 people at the inaugural meeting of Bolsover BNP in Langwith with local residents turning out to support the new group led by Paul Harford, a former Labour Party councillor.

Paul was a member of the Labour Party for 18 years and a local councillor for 14 years, but said that Labour no longer represented the British people.

In his address to the meeting Paul said:

"Our once thriving mining community was brought to its knees during the 80's by the closure Shirebrook and Langwith pits and now we have the added insult of Sports World, the new main employer, signing up Eastern European workers and leaving local people in the dole queue."

The meeting was opened by Shirebrook contact David Key, who spoke about his reasons for joining the BNP and how as an ex-miner, he felt let down by Labour. He urged local people to stand together, which many did by joining the Party on the night, while others took home membership forms for family and friends.

John Ryde, the East Midlands Press Officer and Geoff Dickens the East Midlands Regional Organiser, both stressed the importance of supporting the new group and helping out by becoming active members.

A collection and raffle combined raised over £120, which will be put towards local leaflets for forthcoming recruitment drives.

Labour thugs fail to stop Christmas party

A LABOUR MP led a gang of Labour Party thugs to a car park in Crawley in Sussex in an attempt to stop families, many with young children, from attending a Christmas party.

Laura Moffatt MP and her thugs turned up at the car park in London Road because they thought it was a meeting point for members of the British National Party attending a social event, but she stood around in the cold for nothing after Police tipped off local BNP officials.

A British National Party spokeswoman told the Crawley News:

"We were aware that an intervention would take place so we met at a different location."

The South East's Christmas Party went ahead as planned at a nearby venue where BNP chairman Nick Griffin was the guest of honour. He told the story of Father Christmas to the smaller children.

CHRISTMAS STORY: Nick Griffin with some of the youngsters at the party.

dren there, before the very man himself arrived to hand out the gifts!

Nick presented Mike Witchell of Bognor Regis, with the Activist of the Year award for the South East in acknowledgment of his hard work. This included establishing a Freedom door-to-door round of nearly 100 in his ward where he has polled 26% and 30% in successive elections.

Richard Trower, the organiser of the event, along with other key personnel, were thanked by Regional Organiser Andrew McBride, for all their hard work over the year.

The John Brunt pub gets its new sign

A PUB in Paddock Wood in Kent has paid tribute to a war hero on Remembrance Day by unveiling a new pub sign in his honour.

Captain John Henry Cound Brunt VC, MC (6 December 1922 to 10 December 1944) won the Victoria Cross, the most prestigious award for gallantry in the face of the enemy, when in Italy during the Second World War. He was twice decorated for bravery in action before being killed by mortar fire.

AT LAST: Campaigners unveil the new pub sign on Remembrance Day.

As a young man, he had a reputation for daring, and the actions that won him the Victoria Cross exemplified this, when despite being wounded he single-handedly held off enemy troops, allowing his men to reach safety. The original sign went missing when the pub changed its name to the Hopping Horse in 1997, four years later it reverted back to the John Brunt but the sign had never been replaced until now.

Cut the tax on a pint and allow smoking-only pubs

THE British Beer & Pub Association's quarterly Beer Barometer found that 161 million fewer pints were sold in Britain's pubs this year compared to the same three-month period last year - that's a drop of 1.8 million pints a day.

It is the biggest drop-off in sales in the third quarter of the year since Labour came to power in 1997.

Falling beer sales and the smoking ban are forcing five pubs a day to close and now more than half the villages of England are without an inn or pub for the first time since the Norman Conquest. Industry experts predict that a further 7,500 pubs will be forced to close by 2012, which will mean that each pub, with its distinctive history and local atmosphere conducive as a place not only in which to drink, but also to eat, to meet, to play games and watch sport, will be lost forever.

In rural Britain the pub is the centre of the community in much the same way the Church used to be but now just as the church has faded away, so the pub will follow suit.

The Government is to blame for the demise of the pub with its unfair taxes and draconian smoking ban. Why go out to the local on a cold night when once there you have to pay more for your pint and stand outside if you want a cigarette.

Freedom wants to see the tax on beer sold in pubs to be dramatically reduced and landlords given the choice of whether they want to allow smoking or to serve food.

The British pub is a tradition that must be preserved because its loss will change the face of many of our communities. As nationalist Hilaire Belloc pointed out nearly 100 years ago: "When you have lost your inns, you may drown your empty selves, for you will have lost the heart of England."

OUT IN THE COLD: Pub smokers.

Landlord arrested over 'cuttings' noticeboard

AS if times weren't hard enough for pub landlords, Peter Mailer of the Black Bull Hotel in Warkworth in Northumberland was arrested on suspicion of committing a racially-aggravated public order offence.

The complaint was made by an off-duty police chief from Nottinghamshire, who was on holiday, over a noticeboard of press cuttings on immigration displayed in the pub.

Mr Mailer told the Northern Echo:

"This chap was in with a friend and their respective wives, and I had a chat with them. He certainly said nothing about the items on my wall at the time.

"It seems that this senior officer had to justify his fat salary by rocking the boat in a sleepy little village hundreds of miles away from where he lives."

Landlord Peter Mailer.

Sally Wood STRAIGHT TALKING

Meet the Great Deceiver

I FEEL sorry for the British people of Oldham. They deserve to be represented by an honest and upright member of Parliament, but instead they have Phil Woolas, the epitome of the snake oil salesman.

This is the man who has suddenly decided to talk the talk, and walk the walk of the British National Party. Unfortunately there is just one small problem - he is a member of the Labour Party, that self same Party that has been in power for the last eleven years and which has presided over the flood of immigrants to these shores. Statistics suggest that 3 million immigrants have officially entered the UK in the last 16 years with the majority coming from the Third World, all while the Labour Party has been in Government. Indeed when first coming to power, it was the Labour Party that allowed marriage to be used as a means of immigration and it was the Labour Party that doubled the number of work permits in 2002 and opened the labour market to new EU members without restriction in 2004.

PHIL WOOLAS: Another one of the Labour Party's snake oil salesmen.

Yet Phil Woolas likes to boast of how he has shrunk the vote of the British National Party in his constituency. He says that he has done this by letting voters know he knows what they are thinking. In other words he feels their pain. It is a shame that Oldhammers cannot see through his rhetoric.

One good example of his duplicity was when he recently promised that Britain's population would not be allowed to rise above 70 million, yet he offers no solution to the spiralling immigrant birth-rate nor can he prevent millions of European Union citizens coming to live here if they wish to do so. I fear that as the proportion of white folk of Oldham diminish in numbers relative to the immigrant population, as they surely will, they will lose their voting influence and then Phil Woolas will no longer need to espouse views that he doesn't believe in and will revert back to type.

The Art of Queueing

MENTION the Baltic Dry Index to most people and it will just produce a blank look. If you then go on to explain that it has dropped by more than 90% in the last 6 months it is unlikely that they will have any idea of the implications.

They will not realise that such a large drop of this little known index indicates that ships are just not moving goods. Ship-owners need to get credit from the banks before they send their cargoes as they can never be sure of payment when they reach their destination. Once they are paid they repay the banks but without that cover they will not leave port. It means that bulk goods such as wheat are not being shipped to market, so when reserve stocks run out so will the production of food.

Shortages will lead to queueing for food but this will be nothing new for us Brits as our history books are full of images of our folk stoically queueing in an orderly fashion for bread during the last war. Queues today however can be anything but orderly as was recently demonstrated by an incident on Long Island in the USA recently.

FRONT OF THE QUEUE: To get there you will have to be fighting fit.

By 5.00am, a large crowd had gathered outside Wal-Mart for the traditional discounted goods offered on 'Black Friday' - the day after Thanksgiving. As the crowd from the back pushed forward, pressure built up and the glass doors were forced open with the crowd surging forward like a herd of wildebeests on the move. A shop keeper was knocked to the ground in the ensuing melee, but this did not deter the crowd and he was just trampled under foot. The shoppers even refused to leave the premises after they heard of his death.

I suggest that our elderly and infirm, as well as those who don't fancy a scrum with more street-wise immigrants, should start storing up provisions in case of forthcoming shortages. Queueing in the future will only be for those who are fighting fit and possess sharp elbows.

BNP save the day

by James Mole

MEMBERS of the British National Party have planted trees in the parish of Leicester Forest East.

Since the early 1980s, the county of Leicestershire has lost over 50% of its single landscape trees from rural areas due to the ravages of Dutch Elm Disease and Ash Decline. More recently disorders such as Chestnut Bleeding Canker and Oak Decline are adding to this loss.

Under a County Council initiative, which is aimed at replacing lost trees in rural areas of the county, ten trees (Alder and Maple) were provided to the parish council but no one appeared to want to plant them.

Originally a Labour councillor had agreed to organise the planting but then dropped out leaving the parish clerk with no choice but to use council taxpayers' money to hire an outside firm to plant the trees.

That was until BNP parish councillor Paul Preston, was informed of the problem and he immediately organised a team of BNP members to do the planting without charge.

JOB DONE: BNP Councillor Paul Preston, with one of the newly planted trees.

THANKS to the efforts of British National Party councillor Mark Logan, the BNP Community Action Team and local businesses, the RSPCA office at Chippenham Road in Romford, has been refurbished.

The remedial work to the building should have cost in the region of £25,000, but the whole project was done free of charge. The RSPCA were delighted with the quality of the workmanship, the speed with which it was done and the funding which was gained by Mark Logan in order for the refurbishment to take place.

Now the office has been re-wired and re-decorated both internally and externally. It has a new kitchen, new carpets, a new counter and new UPVC doors fitted. All the decorating materials were provided free of charge by B&Q, after a grant had been applied for, and the kitchen was supplied and fitted by Magnet free of charge.

BNP refurbishes RSPCA office despite the Tories saying it wouldn't happen

Outside in the garden, a youth offenders' team, made up of teenagers making reparation for the crimes they have committed, did a sterling job of cutting brambles and removing debris.

Mark Logan told Freedom:

"It has been an honour and a privilege to project manage this refurbishment and very rewarding to see the community and local business working together in harmony to save such a vital community asset. What a slap in the eye for my ward's two Tory councillors who said the work was too costly to be done. The work is a testament to the people of Harold Hill and shows that they are only too willing to work for the community on worthwhile projects."

BNP COMMUNITY ACTION TEAM: Mick Woods and Ken Seager finish off the tiling in the kitchen.

NHS nurse tells BNP councillor that patients are dying from malnutrition

A NURSE who has been working within the National Health Service for nearly twenty years has blown the whistle on the state of hospitals in the West Midlands.

She contacted her BNP councillor in Tipton, Russell Green, and revealed a grim picture of the systematic dismantling of a health service that was once the envy of the world.

Car parks have been sold off to private companies who have hiked the charges for visitors and patients, and in-house catering has been closed down and the contract given to expensive private providers, which has taken much needed revenue out of the system.

The nurse said that food guidelines stress 'patients are treated as family' and that each individual should have a varied diet and vitamin intake but this is not happening which is affecting patient recovery times.

The widespread use of immigrant nurses and migrant worker ward helpers is putting further strain on the system. This is because they are unfamiliar with procedures, some can't speak English, and their training falls below standards required of British nurses.

In her ward of twenty four patients, washing and feeding is hap-hazard and medication is not administered when it is due. Despite numerous complaints to the management, things haven't improved, and the nurse was even told: "stop causing trouble or go and find a different area to work in". But now other nurses in the same hospital are raising their concerns too. Many believe that elderly patients are actually dying due to malnutrition.

"No one takes responsibility to check the patient's diet, or that they are even being fed on a regular basis. When food is left untouched, no one seems to be concerned as to why the meal is being left. Anyone daring to voice criticism of the system is shot down in flames," says the nurse.

Russell Green was shocked by the revelations but thanked the nurse for bringing this lack of basic care to the public's attention.

"A hard-working and vastly experienced nurse has spoken out and this Government should take notice. A once fine hospital has become a broken institution and patients' lives are now being put at risk," he said

DEBRIEFING: BNP councillor Russell Green, hears the grim truth about a local hospital from a nurse.

Worry spawns awareness

THERE wasn't a worry in the world. Jobs were secure, homes were going up in value every year and for all those little luxuries there were the credit cards and when one card reached its limit, there was always the 0% balance transfer to another card to restore its spending power. Who had any time for politics with all that shopping to do, home improvements to be made, foreign holidays to be taken and 100 plus television channels to be watched. So what if immigration was out of control, the country was being swamped by migrant workers from Eastern Europe, British jobs were being off-shored to Asia and our shops were full of imported manufactured goods and food... we were alright Jack!

THIS HAS been the mindset of the majority of the British people for the last five years. They have switched off to what is happening in Britain today and they have been able to do so because they have been cocooned in their own little world of easy credit which has allowed them to forget about the outside world; pampered in their private world with material goods and needs. But not any more!

Now everyone should be worried. Jobs aren't secure, property prices are crashing, credit cards are hard to come by and 0% balance transfer virtually non-existent. On top of this, each and every household in Britain is saddled with a personal debt of £21,952 in unsecured loans which with interest charges rises every month.

But with this worry will come the awareness. Those who previously didn't have time for politics, will now think of nothing else. Suddenly they will be aware of the need to safeguard their employment, their housing, their health and welfare. Each head of family will become aware of the responsibility he or she has to look after their family and as they do, they will expect the British Government to start looking after them.

This means a Government putting the interests of the British people first. It means providing jobs, homes, and all the essential services for OUR people before anyone else. It means growing OUR OWN food and manufacturing OUR OWN goods and not being reliant for others to feed and clothe OUR OWN people.

Only a British National Party Government would be prepared to look after OUR people in this way and that is why in 2009 the British people will, for the first time in the last five years, start to seriously take a look at the BNP and the policies that we would implement.

BEHIND OUR SUCCESS: The South East of England is one of the British National Party's growth areas and this has come about thanks to the hard work of the region's local organisers who met up at the end of November to plan their strategy for 2009.

Your Say

Letters to the Editor - freedom@bnp.org.uk

Corruption of Labour

AFTER a Daily Mirror headline gleefully announced, "The BNP Exposed", I was contacted by two of that newspaper's journalists with one even purporting to be a BNP official and I have to admit that I was taken in. You see I move in circles where people are who they say they are.

The journalists were disappointed to find that I wasn't a racist. It didn't seem to occur to them that the increasing numbers of professional people in the British National Party, as indicated by the list, might have something to do with the moral bankruptcy of the present political system.

The BNP speaks for Britain and our Christian heritage which is something the main political parties no longer do, as they are only interested in the United States of Europe.

For 45 years I supported the Labour Party, but became totally disillusioned by all the deceit and lies of the Blair years. Labour has taken our country into two illegal wars for which they did not have an electoral mandate. To date, these wars have claimed the lives of some 300 British service personnel and for nothing.

It is the corruption of the 'Old' Labour Party by the 'New' one that the Daily Mirror should be exposing.

Dr R. Barnes, King's Lynn.

Question Time

I WAS hoping that the Question Time from Stoke, where the BNP has nine councillors, would be a landmark programme with the BNP invited on to the panel. But I was to be disappointed.

I wrote to the BBC asking why there was no BNP representation, and editor Gill Penlington, responded by saying that they had endeavoured to make sure that there was a BNP presence in the audience.

She went on to point out: "during the debate, one audience member who said he voted Conservative explained why he thought the local BNP councillors were doing a good job."

Talk about scraps from the table. This chap was an Independent councillor and it is a sorry state of affairs when the BBC's idea of a BNP presence is a former Tory who has now found he has a better chance of being elected by standing as a non-aligned candidate.

Maurice Banks, Birmingham.

Phillips wants more

ONCE again Trevor Phillips, head of the Equality & Human Rights Commission, has criticised Britain for being "racist".

What more can he want of the white indigenous people of this country? We have allowed our small island, with its centuries of tradition and unique way of life, to be subjected to immigration on a scale which defies belief.

Our Governments have drafted laws which put ethnic minorities at the front of the queue for jobs.

We have spent untold millions of taxpayers' money on the vast race relations industry and funding Mr Phillips's considerable salary.

We have changed our traditional laws so that ethnic minority sensibilities can be accommodated.

We have sacrificed our rights of freedom of speech and freedom of opinion, just so that the views, vision and agenda of Trevor Phillips can go unchallenged, and those of us who would oppose their viewpoint are pilloried in the press.

I am at a loss, as to what more we can do to satisfy Trevor Phillips.

John Reed, Wolverhampton.

This racism is OK

AN exhibition at Liverpool's Conservation Centre in Whitechapel called Recollections features the photographs of Phillip Jones Griffiths.

I called in with my children and was surprised to see a photograph of a street scene with the words 'Keep Africa Black' in 2 foot high letters on the gable end of a building.

Can you imagine the furore there would have been if the photo was of the slogan 'Keep Britain White'?

Mick Dorset, Wigan.

Re-Writing history

THE distortion of our history continues without check in politically correct media land.

There is a black female principal character in the adaptation of Little Dorrit, which was written in 1855 and set in Victorian England.

And then in a new series of Sharpe, one of the British soldiers in 1820's India just happens to be an African! Whatever next?

Mike Corfield, email.

Why we need the BNP

IF anyone was in any doubt that Enoch Powell was right then they should watch the London Mayor's Question Time on LBC digital TV. In a recent one, the BNP's GLA assembly member Richard Barnbrook, asked a question about struggling white children who are fast becoming minorities in London.

Boris Johnson wouldn't answer, instead he chose to hide behind Black chairwoman Jeanette Arnold, who said that no answer would be necessary. With so many ethnic groups represented and supported by public money when will white people get their first interest group?

I suspect we never will, and that is why we need the British National Party.

Rory Allanson, London.

Clone development

YOU will be pleased to note that the latest issue of Freedom was on sale at the new Westfield shopping development at Shepherd's Bush in West London.

I bought a copy at W.H. Smith which meant that there was one positive thing to emerge from my inspection of this soulless and unnecessary clone development. It will only be a matter of time before the taxpayer will be forced to pay for urban renewal grants to those existing streets that will obviously be affected by this development. Finally, the newspaper did not have a bar code so the person on the till had to type something into the checkout machine.

The receipt says 'Local Ststy...0.60'. A barcode may be worth considering because it speeds up the transaction and provides instant sales statistics.

Steve Dunkin, Notting Hill.

Achieving your aim

Congratulations on your 100th issue of Freedom.

Unfortunately I cannot claim to have read every newspaper but I sincerely hope to be able to read the next one hundred.

Freedom has certainly achieved its aim in educating the public as to the true face of the British National Party which has undermined the establishment's effort to hang the 'knuckle-dragging skinheads' label on us.

Carol Collett, Leicester.

Pioneer BNP activist scoops Welsh award

by Clive Bennett

ROB McGlynn of Swansea BNP is the Activist of the Year for Wales 2008 and he was presented with the award at his branch's November meeting.

This is the first year for such an award and it was felt that it would be appropriate to consider more than just the 12 month period and to include the record of activism to date when making the choice.

ROB MCGLYNN: Activist of the year.

Rob is one of the longest serving campaigners in Wales and was actively promoting the British National Party even before there was a BNP group in Swansea.

He was a lone activist who bought and distributed the Party's leaflets by himself. It was his dedicated campaigning at this time, keeping the BNP spark bright, that is the reason why the British National Party now has active groups not only in Swansea but in Bridgend, Ammanford, Newport, Vale of Glamorgan, West Wales and South Wales.

Rob, who continues to be as active today, was presented with a framed certificate and a book signed by BNP Chairman Nick Griffin.

Liverpool BNP provides the debate

LIVERPOOL BNP dominated the floor of the BNP's Annual Conference in Blackpool when speakers from the branch spoke both for and against the motion during one debate.

Pete Molloy, a former active member of Fathers 4 Justice, proposed the motion dealing with family law and called for the introduction of a "legal presumption to contact" in the event of a relationship breakdown, so that both parents would have a legal right to direct contact with their child; the introduction of a legal definition for the "best interest of the child" principle; and the repeal of the Civil Partnership Act 2004.

Speaking against the repeal of the Civil Partnership Act was Peter Stafford, also from Liverpool, and a stimulating debate followed. But in the end the motion was carried and a delighted Pete Molloy told Freedom:

"This means that the British National Party is the only Party committed to putting the traditional family unit first. A pledge that will ensure that it is the welfare of our children that is the priority."

Brin's our new man in Cornwall

CORNWALL has a new BNP organiser, Brin Jenkins, who will be ably assisted and kept in line by his very active and competent wife, Gwen.

"Together they form the spearhead on which we shall impale the opposition down here at the pointed end," says South West Regional Organiser Peter Mullins.

Assisted by Cynthia and Mike Wainwright as the leafleting team leaders, Peter Howell the fundholder and lots of volunteers up and down the county, we are anticipating great progress in the sleepiest of Britain's counties.

Brin, a former RAF engineer, and Gwen are committed Christians and will be a valued asset to the Party. They can be contacted at: cornwall@bnp.org.uk

BNP activity catches the eye on St Andrew's Day in Edinburgh

A COLOURFUL show of our country's flags drew attention to a BNP activity on a crisp St Andrew's Day in Edinburgh. Police had been briefed several days prior to the Day of Action which included distributing the special issue of Freedom and handing in a letter at the Scottish Parliament addressed to the Presiding Officer

Alex Fergusson MSP, concerning the fact that members of the Police and Prison Services are not permitted to be members of the British National Party. The BNP team then moved on to Princes Street where during a three hour period, activists distributed hundreds of leaflets and over 250 copies of Freedom.

EDINBURGH: After an hour outside the Scottish Parliament the team walked up the Royal Mile to near by Waverley station in Princes Street.

Self-sufficiency call in Rugby

REMEMBRANCE Day saw the final Rugby BNP meeting of 2008 which attracted one of the highest turnouts of the year.

The guest speaker was the popular East Birmingham organiser Richard Lumby, who spoke about collapse of the global economy and the need for our country to be as self-sufficient as possible in its needs.

He told those present that despite what our opponents throw at us, we must never lose heart or sight of the goals that we want to achieve.

Richard told the meeting that we were all part of the nationalist family and that our strength was our unity in working together to secure a British future for our people. A raffle with 15 prizes on offer proved a great success in raising funds for next year's big election push.

GUEST SPEAKER: Richard Lumby.

Labour official is BNP candidate

A former secretary of the Labour Party in Darlington stood for the British National Party in a local council election in the town.

John Hoodless had been a member of the Labour Party for 20 years before becoming bitterly disillusioned about what they have done to Britain and joining the BNP.

"New Labour is now identical to the Tory Party - the 'old enemy' and only the British National Party offers something different," he told his local newspaper.

John was pleased to come within just nine votes of taking third place from that "old enemy" after winning nearly 10% of the vote in North Road ward.

Union helps BNP teacher get a fair tribunal panel

ADAM WALKER: Victim of a witch hunt.

BRITISH National Party members gathered in Birmingham to demonstrate against the witch hunt of school teacher Adam Walker.

A General Teaching Council (GTC) tribunal was due to be held in the city but was adjourned after representations from the Solidarity trade union.

Adam is accused of using his school laptop to express views "suggestive of racial and religious intolerance," a charge he denies.

Proceedings were brought to a halt when Adam's union representatives voiced his opposition to Judy Moorhouse being on the panel. She is a former president of the National Union of Teachers and is an outspoken opponent of the British National Party.

Solidarity General Secretary Patrick Harrington, argued that Adam was entitled to receive a fair tribunal, and that this would be impossible if Ms Moorhouse was on the panel.

After deliberation, the GTC agreed, and Moorhouse and her colleagues on the panel were stood down.

Mr Harrington told journalists waiting outside the hearing:

"It was clearly inappropriate for Judy Moorhouse to be a judge in this case. The GTC considered the legal arguments and made a decision that will go some way to restoring public confidence."

JUDY HAS GONE: BNP chairman Nick Griffin, tells the BNP demonstrators that their protest has been successful.

Re-launch in Milton Keynes

NOVEMBER saw the re-launch of the Milton Keynes BNP group with a well-attended meeting organised by Mark Burke.

Over 50 members and supporters heard a speech from Tim Rait, the BNP candidate in the Henley by-election, who urged people now to start campaigning for the European Elections.

Andy McBride, the British National Party's South East regional organiser, pledged his support to the new group saying the regional office would support the area all it could with intensive training for local officials and help with BNP activities in Milton Keynes.

WELCOME: Mark Burke opens the meeting in Milton Keynes.

Dining Club hears about Peak Oil

MEMBERS of the Cromwell Diners' Club enjoyed a superb four course meal at a black tie dinner event, held recently in a new venue near Whitwick in the heart of the North West Leicestershire Council District.

The guest speaker was Dr David Fairclough, who gave a lively talk entitled "Peak Oil - a 'peak' from the inside". David works extensively in the Middle East and was able to give members an insight into what is actually happening in this complex region which supplies the West with most of its oil requirements.

Funds raised during the evening will be used to help finance BNP candidates in the up-and-coming council elections in the region.

AFTER DINNER SPEECH: Dr. David Fairclough gives an insight into the oil industry.

IN A closely contested marginal seat in Hinckley and Bosworth, less than 380 votes covered all four candidates.

The BNP vote held up well in the face of huge campaigns by the main parties as the Tories and Labour battled for a seat that has a history of swinging to one Party and then the other.

The Liberal Democrats fought a campaign with the intensity of a parliamentary election and after distributing 16 leaflets, managed to more than double their vote.

South Shropshire Patriots' Dinner hears of BNP growth in the county

by Caroline Snyder

THERE has been a significant increase in support for the BNP in true-blue rural South Shropshire. That was the message from local organiser, James Whittall to the inaugural South Shropshire Patriots' Dinner.

He said that this growth of the Party would be highly important in terms of the overall European Parliament vote in the West Midlands next June.

"The BNP is now in a position to pick up votes in areas that would have been unthinkable as little as three years ago, and the message on the doorstep is simple: people have had enough," he said to loud applause.

The black tie event was a sell-out affair with 40 attending the function at a perfect, traditional location in the county. The dinner raised funds for the South Shropshire & Bridgnorth campaign in the run-up to next year's elections to Shropshire's new Unitary Council and for the Euro elections to the European Parliament.

The gathering was, as always, a genuine cross-section of the community, with those in attendance ranging from the late teens to mid-eighties.

BNP Deputy leader Simon Darby, spoke after dinner, providing amusing anecdotes of recent events including the protest against the less-than-funny prospect of a new mosque in Billesley, Birmingham, where even the local Sikh community came out to publicly support the BNP's stance.

Mr Darby commented on how pleasing it was to see the Party now getting support in areas such as "hideously white" Ludlow, before wrapping up with a toast to South Shropshire BNP for putting on the splendid event.

BNP poll 20% in Bridlington

BRIDLINGTON British National Party stood three candidates in local by-elections held in the town on Thursday November 27th 2008. Gary Pudsey polled over 20% in Bridlington North, while James Cornell and Sarah Jacques had a Party percentage of 22.3% in the dual seat of Old Town Ward.

The turnout was a shocking 10% and the council's electoral department bears responsibility for this as it was the first ever election in Bridlington where voting cards weren't sent out. "This led to great confusion with voters uncertain where to go to vote, or as to whether there was even an election taking place," Gary Pudsey told Freedom.

GARY PUDSEY: 20% in Bridlington North.

CAMPAIGN: Geoff Clynych briefs the meeting on "Racism Cuts Both Ways".

Isle of Wight holds BNP meeting

THE Isle of Wight unit of the BNP held its first meeting which was attended by 40 people.

Geoff Clynych, the new organiser for the Island, welcomed members and supporters who had braved appalling weather to attend.

The key issue for the meeting was the ten thousand houses destined to be built on farmland as part of a Government initiative. Members voted to campaign to stop this destruction of the countryside and South East BNP organiser Andy McBride, presented 6,000 Stop the Building leaflets to launch the campaign.

A collection raised over £150 and after the meeting Geoff Clynych said: "I am amazed at the level of support for the British National Party here on the Isle of Wight. Our mission is to get local councillors elected and assist in the South East constituency's European election campaign."

The Cost of Europe

"Britain's membership of the EU costs the taxpayer £8.5 billion every year"

But the costs of membership are not just monetary...

- ★ Jobs Thanks to the European Union, Britain's businesses are weighed down with bureaucracy and red tape, destroying thousands of jobs.
- ★ Sovereignty The EU is taking power away from Westminster and passing it to the hands of unelected bureaucrats.
- ★ Currency Every member nation will be forced to join the Euro, that means no more pounds, and no more control over our economy.
- ★ Defence £150 billion of British taxpayers' money is being spent equipping our armed forces into a European-controlled 'Super Army'.

The NHS In Crisis
A £512 Million Deficit

Health Secretary Patricia Hewitt was forced to admit that the NHS deficit rose to £512 million - more than double the £250 million target.

15,000 NHS Jobs Face The Axe
In a desperate bid to cut costs in the face of the huge £512 million deficit, over 15,000 NHS jobs are to be axed. This means more understaffed hospitals.

1,000 NHS Beds To Go
More NHS beds are on the way to reduce costs. A further 1,000 beds are to go this year alone.

FACT: There are more managers in the NHS than there are beds for patients.
FACT: The British National Party is the only party willing to cut costs by cutting bureaucracy, and put patients first.

Crime & Antisocial Behaviour Are Out Of Control

Rabbits are up, muggings and sexual assaults are up, burglary is up. A wave of anti-social behaviour is sweeping our streets and estates with a minority of rowdy youths making life unpleasant for the law abiding majority. But where are all the police? But behind desks learning how to be politically correct?

When the police aren't out in offices they're for too busy chasing drivers to collect a range of different fines and penalties in yet more Labour wealth tax schemes. It seems that New Labour view the motorist as the only real threat to public safety!

But while the police are out at the side of the motorway or at political correctness classes the real criminals are free to wreck decent people's lives.

The British National Party would put police back on the streets where they belong. The police would not have their hands tied by politically correct hand cuffs and would be able to deal with criminals without fear of losing their jobs.

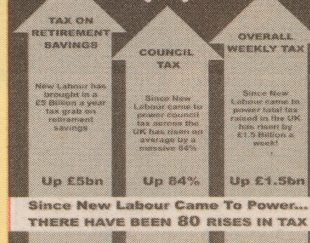

But Where Are All The Police?

Why Should Immigrants Have The Monopoly on Housing?

Why is it so many families seem to go to asylum seekers or those from ethnic minority backgrounds?
Why is it that when young British couples go for a home they're put to the back of the list?
Why is it that the children of British families born to share bedrooms when new arrivals get homes with more space?

IMMIGRATION

The FACTS The Government Doesn't Want You To Know...

FACT Yearly net foreign immigration is now over 300,000.

FACT That does not include over 40,000 asylum seekers who pour in every year.

FACT Immigrants and their descendants now account for 20% of the population growth in the UK. By 2050, 40% of the population will be non-white.

For our fallen heroes

ON Remembrance Day, British National Party members were out in force to pay their respects to those who gave their lives in the service of their country. From the top left and going clockwise, Glasgow, Merton in South West London, Southend, Basingstoke, Croydon, Pendle, Bradford, and Horsham. The two wreaths featured were laid in Epping and Croydon.
